Fr James

Chapter Fifteen of Luke's gospel comprises three of Jesus' parables. Each is powerful, but together they are something else! We read first of the lost sheep, then the lost coin, followed by the lost son. The shepherd, the woman and the father agonise over their individual loss, and there is the greatest rejoicing in all three households when the lost is found. To me, the sheep represents the animal world, the coin represents the material world and the son is there for all humanity. God wants nothing to be lost. All creation is sacred. Love never ends. The name of God is Mercy!

I have been using that interpretation as an encouragement for people to take a fresh look at the Sacrament of Reconciliation. This Sacrament has been sadly neglected, yet it holds the promise of inner healing. Just start with a simple examination of conscience: what has happened today that I regret? What do I need to say "Sorry" for? What will it cost me to apologise? More on this next week.
